HE GOT HIS MONEY.

A Plucky Little Fellow and His Hog.

There was a diverting scene this morning about 8 o'clock, at the intersection of Court and Race streets. It seems that a little fellow had been hired in Covington by a big burly Kentuckian to assist in driving a drove of hogs to the Stock-yards in this city. When they got to the above named place, the hog became obstreperous, and instead, as the hogs were going too slow, on being discharged. He also wanted his money. The Kentuckian refused, and the little fellow, to get even, turned one of the porcine crowd on its back and quietly sat down on it.

He gave the drover to understand that if he "didn't get his sugar this 'og was" going to the stock-yards." Kentucky refused to "come to the scratch," and the lad kept sitting on his newly-acquired territory. The animals were driven ahead, and finding that the boy would not give up, Kentucky finally sent another of his assistants to him. His efforts at a reconciliation, however, were unsuccessful. Finally Old Kentucky himself approached the lad, but he could do nothing towards effecting an amicable settlement of their joint trouble.

By this time a crowd had gathered, and all seemed to enjoy the occasion immensely. Kentucky threatened the plucky little fellow, but he was not daunted, and pulled out an immense knife and let it be understood that he would cut the slivers out of the animal sooner than release his claim. Kentucky made a plunge at the lad, who dodged, however, and presented the point of his weapon to his opponent. The plucky resistance of the boy convinced Kentucky that he had to come to the scratch. He did so as gracefully as he could, and the detained hog was released.

This makes two rather small loaves.—[X. L., New Haven, O.]

New England Brown Bread.—One cupful or a little more of sour milk, two-thirds of a cupful of molasses, a little salt, two cupfuls of rye flour and three of corn meal, Indian meal, or two and one-half cupful of quick warm water enough to mix it, and one teaspoonful of soda; steam three hours and then place in the oven and brown.—[M., Akron, Mo.]

Potato Pie.—One pound of mashed potato rubbed through a colander; one-half pound of butter rubbed to a cream with two cupfuls of white sugar; six eggs, the whites and yolks beaten separately; the juice of one lemon squeezed into the potato while hot; one teaspoonful of nutmeg, the same of mace; beat in shells of paste, or in dishes lined with good paste, without covers. To be eaten cold.—[M., Sand Hill, Ky.]

Turkey Hash.—Cut up the remains of a turkey into small dice with a very little of the dressing; put the gravy you have left in a saucepan with the bones and pieces that you do not use in the hash, adding, if necessary, a little boiling water, together with sweet marjoram, nutmeg, grated lemon peel, salt and pepper, and mushroom catsup, to taste; let it stew slowly one-half hour, then strain it, put in the turkey, and let it simmer one-quarter of an hour, or just long enough for the turkey to get well heated through; serve on three-cornered bits of toast buttered just around the edge of the dish, and if you like you may sift bread crumbs over the top and some small pieces of butter and brown it in the oven or with a heated salamander.—[A.
